CITY BENEFIT PLAN MAY SAVE TAX PROGRAM

House Income Levy is Unconstitutional, Senate Hears.

1934 CLAUSE HIT

Carlton S. Dargusch Goes to Rescue of Legislation.

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 28.—As a new allocation provision to benefit cities was proposed to save the proposed sales tax, the senate taxation committee pondered an opinion today that the house-enacted income tax was unconstitutional.

Prof. Clarence D. Laylin told the committee last night a Missouri court decision held the possibility of balking the income tax as framed by the house because it was designed to provide that the tax be levied on 1934 income and be collected in March 1935.

Laylin, who drafts most of the tax legislation submitted to the assembly, said the Missouri decision held that under a constitution a state cannot adopt a tax law levying on incomes accruing in a year which already has passed.

Senate Expected to Balk
Since the income tax, along with the sales, liquid fuel and increased utility excise taxes, were proposed to raise funds for 1935 only, it was problematical whether the senate could go along on it with the constitutional question in doubt.

The proposed income tax, legislated by the house, already had incurred displeasure because of its rates, and business interests were attacking it as threatening the foundations of business in Ohio.

The house had been insisting, meantime, that it favored a sales tax only if accompanied by the income tax.

The move to save the sales tax legislation from the disaster which threatened by reason of dissatisfaction with its revenues for municipal purposes came from Carlton S. Dargusch, state tax commissioner.

New Allocation Provision
He said that instead of distributing the remainder, after poor relief, schools and other needs were cared for, to counties for distribution on a population-tax duplicate basis, the money should be distributed on the basis of the tax duplicates.

This, he said, would bring more revenue to municipalities who have been clamoring that the house-adopted measure would make conditions even worse for them, and would relieve many rural areas of the embarrassment of having more money than they could spend.

The committee deferred voting on the proposal until today.

It removed $5,000,000 from the allocation for old age pensions, explaining January already had been appropriated for and that the next assembly could set a permanent sum for 1935.

The committee then approved making the allocation for poor relief for six months $12,000,000.

36 GIANTS OF AIR ARE GROUNDED BY WAR DEPT. ORDER

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—A fleet of giants of the air—Martin bombers which can outspeed many a scout plane—has been ordered grounded so the war department can inspect the craft.

Disclosing that the inspection order had gone out, an air corps official said it was done "not because the planes are not safe but because they create some problems we have not considered before."

The planes, 36 in all, are now at March field, near Riverside, California. They streak along at a cruising speed of 190 to 200 miles an hour.

The official denied the death of three men in a bomber's crash in California last month had any connection with the order.

BIDDLE SEEN AS NEXT MINISTER TO IRISH CAPITAL

By The Associated Press.
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The Record says Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., sportsman and member of a wealthy Philadelphia family, will be the next United States minister to the Irish Free State.

He would succeed M. W. McDowell, who died suddenly while attending a state dinner in the Irish capital last April.

Biddle, a World War cavalryman, is a friend of President Roosevelt and of Governor-elect George H. Earle, it was stated.

CITY TO SEEK $18,000 TO PAY BACK SALARIES

Mayor and Director Laughlin Say Debt Is $104,933.

ASK BOND ISSUE

Urge Examiner Call To "Put Our House In Order."

Acting on the request of Mayor O. Earl Greenawalt and Service-Safety Director E. B. Laughlin, council Tuesday night evolved a plan whereby $18,000 may be obtained for part payment of delinquent salaries of municipal employees, which will amount to $36,348 by Jan. 1.

In a two-hour discussion of the financial situation which followed adjournment of the meeting, the mayor and service-safety director estimated that the municipality would owe about $104,933 in salaries and other bills by the end of the year.

Director Laughlin explained this total included the $36,348 for salaries, from since Aug. 1, as well as other bills amounting to $68,585. In the estimate for salaries is about $3,000 for paying eight firemen who were ordered dropped from the department by council, he said.

Creditors Urge Action
The discussion was prompted by creditors who announced they would seek a conference with city officials "in behalf of municipal employees as well as in their own interests," Lee Copenhaver of Dresden avenue, heading a group of grocers, butchers and other merchants, attended the session Tuesday night.

Several plans for solving the financial dilemma were outlined by the lawmakers but each met a snag. A majority of the councilmen favored the transfer of $10,000 from the treasurer's investment fund to the general fund and the use of an additional $8,000 which it is anticipated will be refunded from the $75,000 city hall bond issue.

It was explained by Solicitor Raymond S. Buzzard that permission must be obtained from the state tax commission to transfer the treasurer's investment fund.

48-Cent Gas Rate Ordinance Rejected

By a vote of 5 to 2, council Tuesday night defeated a proposed gas franchise ordinance fixing the rates to be charged domestic consumers here by the Manufacturers' Light & Heat company of Pittsburgh at 48 cents for the first 1,000 cubic feet and 48 cents for each subsequent 1,000 feet.

Councilmen Walter Ashbaugh, Clyde Hall, L. T. Capehart, William J. Hocking and Charles Runberger voted against the ordinance, while Members Harry S. Lindell and James Hall supported it.

Lawmaker Ashbaugh explained his stand on the ground that he "believed the ordinance was not in line with what council really wanted to pass" and recommended that another conference be sought with the gas company officials.

Mr. Hocking acquiesced in Mr. Ashbaugh's opinion and pointed out that "the present ordinance is not acceptable to the gas company and we do not have the money to make a test case of the issue."

Mr. Lindell declared "any ordinance would be objectionable to the gas company," and added that other municipalities have obtained a six-cent reduction and that 48 cents was not "out of the way."

Councilman James Hall said he was in favor of enacting the legislation.

Members Runberger and Capehart declared in favor of a compromise rate. Lawmaker Clyde Hall was non-committal.

An amended appropriation ordinance was passed providing a total of $950 for payment of bills in the various departments.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the employment of Squires, Sanders & Dempsey of Cleveland to pass upon a transcript for the city's share of the Pennsylvania avenue improvement bonds, at a cost not to exceed $40.

MAJOR MARX IS DAVEY AID

Governor-elect Picks St. Mary's Man as Adj. General.

By The Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 28.—Selection of Major Emil F. Marx of St. Mary's as adjutant general of the Ohio national guard to succeed the veteran Frank D. Henderson was announced today by Governor-elect Martin L. Davey.

Before leaving tonight for a Thanksgiving dinner with his family at an unannounced location—"to keep job-seekers from following me"—Davey will announce his director of highways, thus completing his cabinet with the exception of the director of education, whose term will not expire until July.

Dr. Hartung Health Chief
Davey last night appointed Dr. Walter H. Hartung of Toledo, as state health director. Another cabinet appointment made public yesterday was George E. Epley, of Cleveland as director of public works.

The new adjutant general has worked his way up from a buck private to the highest post in the state's militia.

Born in Shelby county 42 years ago, he was educated in St. Mary's Catholic school and St. Joseph's college at Rensselaer, Ind. He enlisted in the national guard as a private, May 14, 1915, and became a corporal and then a sergeant. He was commissioned as second lieutenant shortly before being sent with his company to the Mexican border.

Marx Served in World War
When the United States entered the World War, Major Marx, by this time a first lieutenant with Company B, 148th Infantry, went overseas, participating in many of the major offensives. He later was promoted to captain and then to major, and now commands the third battalion of the 148th infantry.

After the war, Major Marx was a recruiting officer for the national guard, and at present is service-safety director of St. Mary's.

The new health director will be the first Toledo state cabinet appointee in 20 years. Dr. Hartung will succeed Dr. Harry G. Southard of Marysville. Adjutant General Henderson's home also was in Marysville.

Born in Toledo in 1888, Dr. Hartung was graduated from the old Toledo Medical college, and served his internship at St. Vincent's hospital, where he is a staff member. The governor-elect revealed that he is considering the selection of a woman for a place on the state parole board. Marie R. Wing, a Cleveland attorney, has been mentioned in this connection.

Al Kirschner, also of Cincinnati, was injured in the crash. At Lafayette hospital, it was said he received a broken leg, cuts and bruises. The crash derailed one freight car of the train.

ROYAL CINDERELLA BRIDE'S WEDDING IS MADE ORDEAL

Princess Marina, Pretty Balkan Girl, Will Become Fourth Lady of United Kingdom.

By International News Service.
LONDON, Nov. 28.—A modern Cinderella without the rude awakening. A simple, unspoiled young girl rushed into wealth and glittering prestige with no clock to strike the fateful midnight hour.

This is Princess Marina of Greece, the pretty young Balkan girl who on Thursday will become the bride of George, the Duke of Kent, and at the same time the Fourth Lady of the United Kingdom.

Wooded and won by the 31-year-old English prince in a Balkan castle in Yugoslavia, Princess Marina comes to England, wide-eyed and awestruck by the splendor of her new position as bride of a member of the British Royal Family.

Since the day her engagement was announced, Princess Marina has lived in a giddy whirl of social functions and the joyous but arduous task of choosing her trousseau. With her arrival in London for the ceremony, her duties and her pleasures have increased a hundredfold. From the moment she set foot on English soil, she has had little rest, and the pre-nuptial program will keep her on the go until the hour of the wedding ceremony in Westminster abbey.

Introduced to Society
Princess Marina is being introduced to the cream of British society at two lavish social functions Tuesday and today.

The first was a magnificent reception at Buckingham palace, presided over by England's gracious sovereign, Queen Mary, and the second an afternoon party at St. James's palace, where the gifts presented by admirers all over the world are being displayed.

Thus far, Princess Marina has taken everything in her stride, but her kindly English hosts are doing everything in their power to make her feel entirely at home and composed under the scrutiny of the nation and the world.

The Princess has always led an extremely simple life. She spent many years in Paris, but always lived without ostentation or undue luxury. Her family was never a wealthy one, and the end of the monarchy in Greece brought something close to impoverishment to her. It was recalled that when she first started buying her trousseau in Paris, she "shopped around" in various stores just like any other bride-to-be of modest means, flatly rejecting the expensive luxuries which salesgirls and store managers attempted to thrust upon her.

"Happiest Girl in World"
Her every action and spoken word bears out the truth of her ecstatic declaration just after the engagement was announced that she is "the happiest girl in the world." There is no question that the marriage is a love match pure and simple. No matters of state entered into it, although Britain's prestige in the Balkans is expected to be enhanced as a result.

The only "matchmaker" who figured in the romance at all was the late King Alexander of Yugoslavia, at whose castle in Bled the couple first met. He was the first to see the romance budding and gave the prince and princess every opportunity to meet and ripen their friendship. Ironically, he will be the only close relative of Princess Marina who will be absent from the wedding because of the assassin who shot him down in the streets of Marseille a few weeks ago.

Those who have watched her say Princess Marina will not falter when the eyes of the world are upon her at the wedding ceremony. It will be an ordeal, however, for the program of the ceremony will place her in public view for hours.

Five Clergymen Aid In Royal Wedding

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Princess Marina of Greece will be a twice-married bride.

She will be married according to the Anglican church ritual at Westminster abbey to the Duke of Kent at 11 a. m. Thursday. The ceremony will be followed by another marriage according to Greek Orthodox rites.

WOMAN HELD IN 3 GIRLS' DEATH

Mystery of Carlisle, Pa., Tragedy Seems Near Solution.

By The Associated Press.
CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 28.—Stanley Massey of Eccles college, Philadelphia, announced today he found traces of poison in new death masks made last night of the three little girls found dead on a nearby hillside last Saturday.

Investigators predicted the mystery would be solved by sundown. They apparently attached great importance to the finding of a woman in Philadelphia who was said to have some knowledge of the case. She will be brought here today to view the bodies, although it was emphasized that she is not under arrest.

The finding of the woman was described by one of the investigators as the "best break" so far in the efforts to solve the mystery.

Tourist Camp Owner Aids
The part of the "mystery woman" in the girl's death, and possibly in the deaths of a man and woman near Duncansville, 70 miles further west, was described by an official as "highly important" but he would reveal no information as to the circumstances under which the woman was held.

Mrs. Gooden Dill, of Langhorne, also is to come here today to view the bodies.

Yesterday after hearing a description of the family of five which stopped at her tourist camp last week for several days, state police said it tallied with that of the slain girls and the adult couple at Duncansville.

California Angle Checked
Her story is that the family came November 19 and left November 21. The adults, who gave the names "Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Malone," were "very distant" at first but later said they were from Vallejo, California.

Mrs. Dill saw their black bag, described as similar to that found near the girls' bodies, and a wash cloth, with a stitched "X" also like one found there.

Vallejo police said no Malone family of that description lived there.

After four days of false clues Lieutenant Harry L. McElroy, chief of state police detectives, today said "the whole set-up looks good. We have a chain of circumstances that you can't jump over."

McElroy came here today with a detail of state police to examine several persons described as "important witnesses."

"BABY FACE" NELSON KILLS TWO FEDERAL AGENTS AS HE FLEES

Samuel P. Cowley and Herman E. Hollis, Who Aided in Tracking Down Floyd, Shot to Death Near Chicago.

MANHUNT IS INTENSIFIED

John Hamilton and Nelson's Wife said To Have Accompanied Desperado; Fugitives' Auto is Abandoned.

By The Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Samuel P. Cowley, one of the federal government's ace man-hunters, died early today from bullet wounds inflicted in a gun battle with George (Baby Face) Nelson in which another federal man was killed.

He died in an Elgin hospital as the government threw all its power into a hunt for Nelson, one of the few remaining members of John Dillinger's gang. Nelson was named as one of two men who shot down Cowley and Herman E. Hollis in a burst of gunfire in suburban Barrington late yesterday afternoon. Hollis met death instantly in the shower of bullets that Nelson and an unidentified companion unloaded in a brief, but furious, gun battle.

Even as he lay dying, it was disclosed by department of justice agents that Cowley was the real leader in the federal drive that brought down the notorious Dillinger, although Melvin H. Purvis, head of the Chicago office of the bureau of investigation, had been generally credited with being Dillinger's nemesis. Cowley also aided the government's manhunters in tracking down Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd in a cornfield near East Liverpool, O., last month, department of justice agents disclosed.

Relentless Search for Fugitive
Hollis, who was with Cowley and Purvis when the Oklahoma had man was shot to death, was reported to have fired one of the bullets that killed Dillinger in front of a North Side movie theater last July.

Thus Nelson, the nation's public enemy No. 1, took deadly vengeance for the slaying of Dillinger, but in so doing he signed his own death warrant for federal agents carried on a relentless search for him with orders to shoot first.

In addition to all the power the department of justice could concentrate in this area, half of the 200 detectives of the Chicago police force were called into the hunt for the baby-faced killer.

For hours after the new outburst of warfare between the government and the remnants of the Dillinger gang, the police combed the "Badlands" of the city, striking here and there for a clue to the whereabouts of the pair. The second fugitive is believed in some quarters to have been John Hamilton, a lieutenant in the Dillinger mob.

Search Home of Nelson's Kin
Two arrests were made by raiding squads of police and federal agents. Chester Leader, a garage owner, and Lester Van Huston, operator of a tavern, both described as associates of Nelson, were seized for questioning. Detective bureau squads also searched the home of Nelson's mother and sister, but found no trace of him.

The search apparently was centering in the north and northwest sections of Chicago and adjacent suburbs, but was extended to Minneapolis and St. Paul on the theory the killers might seek a hideout in the Minnesota twin cities.

The killers who fought a running fight with the federal agents as they sped along a highway, escaped in the automobile of the federal officers. They had halted their own machine and pumped their deadly machine gun bullets at Hollis and Cowley when the two stepped from the car and advanced toward the gangsters with drawn guns.

Nelson's Wife Believed Wounded
Hollis, who was with Federal Agent W. Carter Baum when the latter was slain, allegedly by Nelson, near the Little Bohemia summer resort not far from Mercer, Wis., last April 22, and Cowley were en route to a house in which they believed Nelson and possibly Hamilton were hiding when they spotted the desperadoes' car. In it were two men and a woman, the latter believed to have been Nelson's wife. She was believed to have been wounded.

As the gangsters' car roared past the machine in which the agents were riding the officers swung their machine in pursuit.

"We could hear the roar of the motors and then shots as the men in the second car began shooting at the other," Mrs. Frances Kramer, operator of a gasoline filling station, and a witness to the killings said.

"Someone in the first car shot back. Just before they reached my station the second car pulled abreast of the other on the outside. I heard the tires of the first car screech as the driver swung sharply into a little side road about 200 feet past the station.

"The second car swerved with it and managed to pull ahead just off the highway, blocking the way of the other car which slid half into a ditch. A woman jumped out, ran up the road a few yards and plumped down in the ditch. Both men had jumped at the same time and faced the other car with what looked like machine guns. They started firing as the two men in the federal car got out.

"All four men were using automobiles as shields at first. One

SLAIN BY NELSON

Shot down while engaging George (Baby Face) Nelson, so-called "Public Enemy No. 1" and former member of the Dillinger gang, and two companions in a gun battle at Barrington, Ill., Chicago suburb, Samuel Cowley, above, federal department of justice agent, died today. H. E. Hollis, a special government agent, was instantly killed.

of the agents (Cowley) fell over backwards into the ditch. The other darted across the road behind a telephone pole. He dropped a few minutes later."

Which Nelson and his two companions escaped was found abandoned today in Winnetka, North Shore suburb.

Nelson's Gangster Pal Shot
Another witness, Robert Hayford, of Barrington, a park employee, said that one of the gangsters, apparently Nelson's companion, was wounded in the leg, and was able to get on his feet only with great difficulty after the federal agents had ceased firing. Hayford was about 400 yards from the scene at the time and threw himself on the ground to avoid getting hit.

As the smoke of the fight was clearing the gunmen called to their woman companion, jumped into the federal agents' machine and drove away, leaving behind their own machine disabled and punctured by bullets.

In making their escape in the agents' machine the killers duplicated the trick the killer of Agent Baum resorted to when he fled the scene of Baum's death near the Little Bohemia resort in Wisconsin.

"Get Nelson," Purvis Says
Melvin Purvis, head of the Chicago office of the bureau of investigation, declared he would "get" Nelson if it was the last thing he did.

Standing by the bedside of Cowley a few minutes after his right-hand-man had died, Purvis whispered.

"I'll get 'Baby Face' Nelson—dead or alive."

"Nelson ought to know he hasn't a chance of eventual escape. It's only a matter of time."

"There were some of the Dillinger gang we should like to have taken alive, but Nelson wouldn't do us any good."

"We aren't particular whether we take him alive or dead."

Purvis said the shooting was not a duplicate of the affray near Mercer, Wis., which cost the lives of two persons.

Talks to Purvis in Hospital

Cowley was still conscious when he was taken to an Elgin, Ill., hospital, but Hollis was dead when removed to the same institution.

"Did you get Purvis?" Cowley asked. "I must talk to him before I die."

Purvis hurried to the hospital and emerged sometime later from the operating room, asserting that Nelson was the driver of the killers' machine and that the federal investigators believed that the woman in their machine was Mrs. Betty Gillis, Nelson's wife.

Hunt for Outlaw Intensified

The hunt for Nelson was focused on the back fringe of that exclusive residential area fronting on Lake Michigan north to Highland park.

Led by four department of justice agents, Sheriff Lester Tiffany of Lake county and Chief of Police Eugene Spald of Lake Bluff, a squad at dawn swooped down on the home of Jack Durand, foster son of the socially prominent Scott Durand, on Sheridan road just north of Lake Bluff.

The officers searched the home from attic to cellar and extended their hunt to the barns, outhouses and woods, but found no trace of the outlaw. From there they went to the Scott Durand home, where they searched through barns and the great wooded estate. However, they did not invade the home.

Mrs. Durand said the federal men told her the government had information that Nelson had a hide-out somewhere in the neighborhood of the Durand's estate farm. She said she had told them she was willing to do anything possible to aid in the hunt.

Two squads from the Chicago detective bureau spent the night running down clues to the killer's whereabouts, but without results.

Slain Officers Aided in Trapping Floyd

Two of the department of justice investigators, who, under the leadership of Melvin H. Purvis, trapped and killed Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd in a cornfield on the Ellis Conkle farm in the Clarkson road, Oct. 22, met death from machine gun bullets in a battle in which George (Baby Face) Nelson, a gangster pal and a woman companion escaped, at Barrington, a Chicago suburb, Tuesday afternoon.

They were Samuel P. Cowley and Herman E. Hollis, government agents who played no minor roles in the Floyd drama which occurred two days after Adam Richetti, the Oklahoma bad man's partner in crime, was captured by Chief of Police John H. Fultz in the Silver Switch hollow near Wellsville.

Asked Surrender of Richetti

Cowley died in a hospital at Chicago early today, while Hollis was instantly killed when the death-rattling machine gun of Nelson, Dillinger desperado and Public Enemy No. 1, was fired as the gangsters' automobile and a motor car carrying the federal agents met.

Cowley, who joined Sheriff Bash of Kansas City in conferences with Police Chief Fultz at Wellsville on the government's request for the surrender of Richetti as a suspect in the union station massacre in the Missouri city, fell critically wounded with bullets in his abdomen after Hollis had been shot down.

Hollis was the "G" man who reported the killing of Pretty Boy to Patrolman Leroy Wise at the police station here about a half hour after the manhunt climaxed on the Conkle farm. Hollis and Cowley were members of the government force which, joined by Chief of Police Hugh J. McDermott and other patrolmen, cornered Floyd as he entered an automobile to drive to Youngstown.

An autopsy showed three machine gun bullets, fired by federal agents, stopped the flight of Floyd. Police officers in the manhunt were armed with automatic revolvers, rifles and sawed-off guns.

Cowley Here Several Days

Cowley remained here a few days after Purvis and other federal agents left to resume the hunt for Nelson. His purpose was to endeavor to obtain custody of Richetti, Floyd's companion, for prosecution in the Kansas City slayings. However, his mission was unsuccessful, for Richetti was later surrendered to Missouri authorities for trial on a charge of killing Sheriff Roger Wilson and Sergeant Ben Booth of the state highway police. Incidentally, Associated Press dispatches today indicated Richetti may escape trial on the Missouri killing charges, for an Iowa farm worker was reported to have made a confession clearing the Floyd gunman.

Hollis arrived in East Liverpool Sunday, Oct. 21, with Mr. Purvis and other department of justice agents after the latter had identified fingerprints of Richetti, forwarded him by Police Chief Fultz.

On Tuesday, Oct. 23, Mr. Purvis, Mr. Hollis and two other department of justice men left for the west to take up the trail of Nelson.

Hollis Revealed As Man Who Shot Dillinger

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—An unsung hero while he lived, Federal Agent Herman E. Hollis stands revealed in death as "the man who shot Dillinger."

But it was not until Hollis met death himself at the hands of a former Dillinger mobster that it was disclosed whose hand had fired the gun that brought Dillinger down.

The disclosure was made inadvertently by a federal agent after word had been received that Hollis and Samuel P. Cowley had been shot down by Baby Face Nelson and a companion believed to be John Hamilton, both Dillinger gangsters.

"Damn them," he cried, "Hollis killed Dillinger and now they got him."

He did not elaborate, and additional information whether Hollis was the man who shot Dillinger could not be obtained.

When Dillinger was slain, the department of justice announced the name of his killer would never be made public.

Hollis remained in the bureau of investigation against the pleadings of his young wife who feared for his safety. But he had been close by when W. Carter Baum, his friend and fellow agent, was slain by Nelson near the Little Bohemia resort in Wisconsin last April and he pledged himself to the service until Nelson was dead.

A native of Des Moines, Ia., Hollis entered Drake university and later transferred to Georgetown university in Washington, D. C. After a year's training in the bureau of investigation he was sent to Oklahoma City. Later he became agent in charge of the Detroit bureau, and still later was transferred to Chicago.

He was married on Thanksgiving day, 1927, to Miss Genevieve Glenn of Council Bluffs, Ia. Besides his widow he is survived by a 4-year-old son. Relatives said his body would be taken to Des Moines for burial.

Nelson Is Blamed For Killing Three Agents

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The department of justice said today that Baby Face Nelson was the only man who ever killed more than one of its operatives. He is blamed for the death of three.

When Samuel P. Cowley and Herman Hollis fell yesterday, the department lost two of its best men. Besides these, Nelson is accused of killing Agent W. Carter Baum when John Dillinger and his mobster shot their way to freedom from an inn at Spider Lake, Wis.

Among other agents killed in recent years were:

Raymond Caffrey, shot in the Kansas City "massacre" of June, 1933.

Edward J. Shanahan, killed while making an arrest in Chicago in October, 1925.

Paul Reynolds, found shot in a canal at Phoenix, Arizona in August, 1930.

City Asks Fund For Back Pay

ter councilmanic legislation is enacted and a hearing called by the common pleas court. The procedure would require at least three or four weeks, provided no objections are filed, he said.

Bond Proposal Discouraged

The issuance of bonds to cover the entire bill of $104,933 up to Jan. 1, in anticipation of revenue from a proposed sales tax now before the state legislature, was discouraged by the solicitor who pointed out there may be no such provision in the state enactment.

Mayor Greenawald and Director Laughlin also recommended that council engage an examiner from the state auditor's office at a nominal fee to "put our house in order," explaining that it was almost "impossible" to determine the exact figures in the various municipal funds or to check the actual cash with the book balances. "If this was done," Mr. Laughlin said, "we would then know just where we stand and how much operating revenue we will have."

Mr. Laughlin also charged that part of this year's operating funds "were used for the payment of salaries last year" and that some funds were overdrawn. He declared there was an overdraft of $24,000 in the special assessment fund alone.

Water Works Fund Low

While the water works department holds $31,000 in negotiable securities, it would be necessary to sell below par to realize from this source, providing a market could be found, the director said. There should also be about $22,000 cash in the water works fund, according to the books, but a large part of this has been diverted for other purposes, he added.

The mayor, Mr. Laughlin and members of council declared they had been unable to obtain a complete statement of the municipality's assets or obligations from Auditor Shelton J. Overdorf. Mr. Overdorf did not attend the meeting.

HANCOCK ADOPTS SIX-YEAR HIGH SCHOOL SYSTEM

Special To The Review.

NEW CUMBERLAND, W. Va., Nov. 28.—Measures are being considered by the Hancock county board of education to organize the New Cumberland and Chester high schools under a six-year plan as soon as building space is acquired. It was announced today by H. O. Miller, county superintendent, the program will be effective to 240 seventh and eighth grade pupils in the two schools.

Three schools in the county, Wells high in Newell, Weir high and Dunbar high in Weirton are already classified in the six-year group.

FASCIST VIENNA GUARDS AGAINST PUTSCH BY NAZI

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—Revolt-scarred Vienna resounded again today to the rumbling of militia as the Fascist government guarded against a possible Nazi putsch.

Student riots which reached alarming proportions yesterday, had subsided, but the pro-German aspect of the demonstrations left officials fearful.

Steel-helmeted police and auxiliary forces were called on duty to support the already heavy forces of mounted police patrolling the streets.

The student outburst, caused by the recent anti-German riots at the University of Prague, Czechoslovakia, was interpreted as a clear indication that supporters of the Nazi cause in Austria, under cover since Dollfuss' assassination last summer, are growing bolder.

After sharp battling police repulsed the students yesterday when they attacked the Czechoslovak legation.

The ax fell on the journalism students only a few hours after Long returned to Baton Rouge from a "honeymoon" trip to Arkansas.

By FRANK E. FRIES, International News Service. CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 23.—Five hundred fully-equipped United States coast guardsmen today are within 12 hours' distance of any—even the remotest—section of Ohio that might suddenly be swept by a major flood disaster.

An entirely new set-up which would enable the standing army of coast guardsmen to leave for relief duty almost at a moment's notice and reach the center of the stricken area within 12 short hours was disclosed in an interview here.

The newly-evolved plans were explained by Lieutenant H. L. Connor, who accompanied Captain H. H. Wolf, of Cleveland, commander of the whole northern area of the coast guard, on a four-day investigation tour that carried them from ledo, for transfer to Cincinnati and other southern points. From 150 to 500 would be available along the route to step into active duty, the lieutenant said. As many of these as were needed would be rushed to the flood scene on the special train.

If the flood developed in the northern portions of either of the two large rivers, the coast guard relief corps would strike for that region and follow the flood to its ultimate recession.

The work of the coast guard is radically different from that of the army as far as floods are concerned, he said. While the army handles most of the flood preventative work done in the nation, the coast guard is called upon in time of floods to aid the victims.

HARRISON SEES COMPROMISE ON BONUS PAYMENT

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Chairman Harrison of the Senate finance committee made the flat prediction today that if advocates of the soldiers' bonus would agree to a compromise to cash the service certificates now for only the needy former service men it would be passed by congress.

Harrison was just back from a trip to Warm Springs, where he discussed the bonus and other questions with President Roosevelt. The statement appeared to leave no doubt that the administration would approve of such a compromise.

"The bonus is receiving consideration from every angle," Harrison said at a press conference. He added he did not believe the Senate would pass over a veto a full cash bonus.

"The President is the leader," he said, "and what he finally decides to do as in the best interest of the country in the matter of the bonus, the Congress will sustain him in that position."

Thanksgiving

Observance of the Thanksgiving holiday in the United States, though regulated nominally by official proclamations, is fundamentally a natural expression of gratitude. The Pilgrims, to whom the holiday's history is traced, merely happened to be the first group on this continent to formalize the occasion. Other nations give thanks for harvests in festivals of different names, but all originating from the same root.

It is tempting to try to bring Thanksgiving up to date by interpreting it annually in accordance with varying conditions. But this can be misleading. Gratitude for the earth's abundance in a land where plentiful harvests are the rule should not be affected by specious considerations of crop-control theories, problems of distribution and variations in food prices. The land has yielded more than enough to sustain the people; that is the important thing.

There is as good an occasion for gratitude in 1934 as there was after the first Pilgrim harvest in 1621, and probably a better one. Then it was a question whether or not the new world could support a handful of immigrants from the old world. Now it is only a question of distributing the abundant products of the land among the millions whose forefathers flocked to the land "where every man might be a king." The soil has been proved ample. Only proof of intelligence to use the soil is in question.

Thanksgiving this year should be an occasion to be grateful for another year of good crops yielding despite regional drouths and vexing faults in distribution. It should be an occasion to express thanks for centuries of assured sustenance for a growing nation. Americans, wealthy beyond comprehension in possession of land whose productivity never has been taxed, take their high living standards for granted. Thanksgiving provides a formal occasion for reflection. The land has been good, perhaps too good for the moral fiber of its beneficiaries.

No Fundamental Objections

This is the time of year when calendar reformers begin to show unusual activity. Their relentless campaign of education comes to a natural climax annually when new calendars are being scanned.

Calendar reform gained an important convert when the Episcopal church in its recent general convention adopted a resolution in its favor. If religious bodies, with vital interest in holidays, can be won over, calendar reformers believe they will have driven a wedge into legislative objections.

Under the so-called world calendar every year would be the same. The first of January always would fall on Sunday. There would continue to be 12 months, with four 31-day months and eight 30-day months. The 31-day months would be January, April, July and October, the months occurring at the beginning of yearly quarters.

Quarters would comprise exactly 13 weeks, or 91 days, with 13 Sundays and 78 weekdays. Each month would have exactly 28 weekdays. The odd 365th day would occur between Dec. 30 and Jan. 1. In leap years the additional 366th day would occur as an extra Saturday between June 30 and July 1.

Advantages of a balanced calendar are obvious. The fact is, there are no fundamental objections to such a calendar, only a tremendous mass of resistance consisting of nine parts of indifference and one part of miscellaneous reservations of secondary importance. Every year would be the same. After one or two years under a world calendar, there would be no place for calendars at all. One wonders how so completely logical an advance in the computation of time can be stopped, yet only enthusiasts can believe in this generation that calendar reform has made more than a good beginning in its campaign of education.

Availability

In United States politics a man's availability for a job may be determined almost as much by what he hasn't done as by what he has done. One decision is enough to disqualify him, which helps explain why so many politicians arrive at decisions reluctantly. They can be as fatal in the hands of an opponent as love letters in a breach of promise suit.

One of the principal results of the election was to shove into the spotlight Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, hailed as a man who may be available for the Republican presidential nomination in 1936. This has come about because Sen. Vandenberg is one of the few Republicans who survived the voting last Tuesday. It is assumed, therefore, that he must have merit above less fortunate Republicans.

Sen. Vandenberg will be conspicuous in his new role, uncomfortably so sometimes. From now on, his decision will be matters of public interest. Every word, every move, every look will be probed for hidden meaning. The senator's record will be, in fact already has been, gone over with a fine comb.

Legislatively, these things have been dug up and brought to light. Sen. Vandenberg voted for the emergency banking bill, the economy bill, the 30-hour week bill, the sales tax, the stock exchange control bill, the St. Lawrence treaty, the gold reserve bill and to override President Roosevelt's veto of the independent offices act. He voted against the inflation amendment, the agricultural adjust bill, the industrial recovery bill, the bill invalidating the gold clause, the Tugwell nomination, the silver bill, the reciprocal tariff bill, the cotton control bill and the emergency air mail bill.

On the record, Sen. Vandenberg looks like a conservative (a Republican) more than he looks like a liberal (a Democrat). Yet, he looks like a little of each, which is what makes his availability as a presidential candidate a question of the moment. The recipe for being president, incidentally, hasn't changed. It reads: First, get a new-born baby and see that it never does any of the wrong things. Good luck, Sen. Vandenberg. May your future and your more remote past produce nothing worse than your recent record as congressman.

Give Him The Air

Cabinet Officer James A. Farley, apparently speaking in his triple capacity as postmaster general, national Democratic chairman and New York Democratic chairman, finally came up to expectations by gloating over his party's victory in the election. His words went to the country over a national network of broadcasting stations.

Fortified, perhaps, by the first postoffice department surplus in 15 years, Mr. Farley spoke with an assurance as big and robust as himself. Unfortunately, it was almost too big to be contained comfortably inside the limits of reason. Like many politicians, the postmaster general seemed to make the mistake of assuming the present is everything and the future is nothing.

If the Democratic party proves itself fit for the trust given to it, he predicted, its direction "of our national affairs will continue indefinitely; if we do not, the people will not forgive us and will turn the government over to other hands." One wonders if Mr. Farley will turn back to this statement when and if his party loses its power. Perhaps he doesn't expect to live that long.

Probably it will never happen, because, as he says, "party fealty" has been subordinated to "national welfare." Partisans have been rebuked. Only Democrats remain, and they will cooperate with the chief executive to the last ditch. Within themselves they carry the seeds of regeneration. Free of binding partisanship, they will do the right thing always, thereby making political opposition unnecessary as well as impossible.

Listening to such things from the mouth of Mr. Farley, one wonders intensely what other ideas may be bubbling 'neath the shining hood of his practical intellect. Here, plainly, is a man with a vision as important as that which has led Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency. The two-party system is as dead as it ever has been in the United States. Mr. Farley, with a proud foot on the corpse, looks through the uncertainty of present fear into a future when Roosevelt Democrats, voting always for the good of the country, will provide a better government than ever existed before. A great man is Mr. Farley. Give him air and he will show possibilities of expansion undreamed of by his contemporaries.

OHIO IN HISTORY

By

J. H. GALBRAITH

When Money Voted In Ohio
It was frankly the intention that in Ohio under the first constitution "money should talk" in the running of the government. There could hardly be any other interpretation of the provision that only white male inhabitants above the age of 21, who had been residents of the state at least one year and who had "paid or were charged with a state of county tax" would have the right to vote.

That would seem to indicate intention on the part of the makers of the constitution that men without property should not have the franchise. It was made even plainer that persons without property should not be sent to the legislature. In the case of members of the general assembly it was expressly provided that no person should be eligible to a seat in that body who had not actually paid such a tax. Those fellows had no intention of letting any person without property get close to the power of voting taxes on those who had property.

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Nov. 28.—I wrote a little "gas" the other day about "appealing to the President for a guarantee," and I bet a lot of you thought it just to be writing. Well, get this headline in the papers today:

C. L. Bardo, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, asks the President the following: "Business must have more definite ideas as to the direction in which the government is headed."

I can just see Mr. Roosevelt rushing in with a guarantee reading about as follows: "No body guaranteed me anything when I took over this job. No man gambles more than a president of the U. S., so you will pardon me if I am not able to guarantee business that it won't lose."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Pleasure seekers, jaded by repetitious tit-bits in the cafes and on the stage, have been regaled by a surprising burst of new, young and vibrant talent this season. And it has given a fresh vogue to night clubbing and perked up all amusement endeavors.

Perhaps the most notable of the conquests has been that of Mrs. Eve Symington, a member of the socially prominent Wadsworths, whose supper club chanties have brought the orchid and ermine carriage trade on the gallop. Then the two singing Franceses—Langford and Maddox.

Dwight Fiske, whose ditties salted smart parties on Long Island, has broadened his sphere via the radio. In the dancing division Louise Brooks and Dario threaten to recapture the furors of the Castles. Miss Brooks is also of the socially elite. Gladys George is a grand new legitimate star.

The feather-footed Paul Draper, young and blond, is a rival of Bill Robinson. On the stage, Jane Wyatt and Lillian Emerson, comely and of the blue-bloods, have been plucking heart strings with emotion and song. And there is the mama's boy, Milton Berle, whose impudences tickle many.

In Harlem, staytouts have been flocking to behold a floor show of a cellar cabaret where every high yellow "chorus girl" turns out to be a man. It is the most flagrant of the androgynous antics, more flagrant indeed than the shocking exhibitions at the Petite Chauxieres of Montmartre memories.

Probably the first of the New York night clubs was Jimmy Kelly's on Sullivan street, on the lower East Side. It was a back room, sawdust carpeted, in rear of a plumber's shop and, refurbished, is still catering fun. There Tommy Lyman, pale and suspiciously bright-eyed, billed as the "tubercular tenor," first wandered from table to table whispering his laments, which he called by the now smudgily vague term, "torch song." Kelly's was considered a slumming jaunt, and from its humble beginning spread more pretentious clubs. Texas Gulnan, then in a six-shooter cowgirl vaudeville act, used to be a dropper-in at Kelly's and these visits were likely inspiration of her later invasion of the field.

Miss Gulnan's white-haired parents, incidentally, are still occasional visitors to the bright sort of places over which their daughter quipped. They used to be at Tex's almost every night, sitting, as they do now, on the fringe of the crowds, incongruous and bewildered figures in the Manhattan madness. They might be a sedate deacon and wife at a church social. Their daughter left them comfortably fixed.

When the night club furor swept uptown the gem of the galaxy was "The Little Club," presided over by the Polities evel, Justine Johnstone, now wife of Walter Wanger. It had the first postage stamp dance floor and that suffocating intimacy that became so popular. This was followed by Bustanoby's Domino Room, featuring similar stuffiness in black and white, that snapped into delirium around 3 a. m. And always in the 9 o'clock sun glare jubilant could be seen debouching from Bustanoby's to waiting conveyances at the curb.

New York has an army of approximately 100,000 antique collectors. The biggest colony lives around Washington Square, but they are scattered all over town. Florence Ryerson and Collins Clement call the mania Collectivus Furnituribus and apparently there is no cure. One starts off admiring a Chippendale, Sheraton or run-down fiddle-backed horror, and winds up snooping through musty warehouses for a Salem cobbler's bench or a Windsor honey. And over in Jersey tra, la, two plants reputedly turn out antiques by gross lots.

Gene Fowler dedicates his Mack Sennett biography to his friend, W. C. Fields. As naturally as the pine springs to the sun, these two meandering merry Andrews have found a rollicking camaraderie. Loose on the boulevards, their etsy of cut-uppery, must be distracting even for a community that made the innocent skush of a custard pie smack in the face high art.

Don't Pick Up Hitch-Hikers

Some plan should be adopted to lessen the number of "hitch-hikers" who swear at motorists who refuse to pick them up.

Many are particularly abusive and the fact that the cars contain women does not have any effect in checking their vile epithets.

It is unfortunate that more drivers of cars who are subjected to the abuse of pan-handlers are not physically prepared to give them a beating.

Each time such treatment is administered it would remove another from those guilty of such practice.

Few motorists would refuse a worthy man a ride from one place to another.

But so many have been robbed for their kindness of heart, even by the women who have asked to ride, that drivers are afraid to stop for them.

At present when so many hikers are held up men and desperate characters it is not safe to take a stranger into a car.

For a few years college boys were able to save transportation by this method of getting a ride back and forth.

Then came the college dressed hold-up men, and now conditions are such that the wise autoist passes by all "humbers."

Most of them are not deserving of assistance.

Behind the News IN WASHINGTON AND WALL STREET

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The public crack which Mr. Roosevelt delivered across the knuckles of Messrs. Ickes and Moffett was meant to be a lesson to a lot of other sub-bosses in the new deal.

If you had listened in on the long distance telephone from Warm Springs you would have learned that Mr. Roosevelt was not particularly excited about the Ickes-Moffett scrap. What perturbed him was the rumor he has been hearing from Washington about a rather general similar situation which has arisen inside the new deal.

It happens every time the head man goes away. The bureau chiefs plant a lot of inspired stories in the newspapers hinting that the President is going to do this or that thing which they want him to do.

Grab-Bagging

The results, this trip, were worse than usual, because the bureau bosses had wind of reorganization plans. Each has the idea that the proper reorganization would be an enlargement of his particular bureau. That is natural.

It has not been disclosed, but at the same time as the Ickes-Moffett spat, Mr. Ickes was caught with his hand on Mr. Wallace's forestry bureau. For some time Mr. Ickes has looked with longing eyes on the forestry service.

Agriculture Secretary Wallace was asked about the matter recently, and with significant evasion replied: "Mr. Ickes and I are the best of friends."

Also the relief, Mr. Hopkins, had his hand in the same housing grab bag with Messrs. Moffett and Ickes, but he got it out before they got caught.

Happy Family

Since the teacher corrected the two toughest boys, all the rest have been acting as cherubs. They have all taken their tune from Wallace. They are the best of friends. None feel hurt.

They deny ardently that they had their hands in the jam pot anyway. Just the same it would be wise for the average news reader, the business man and the speculator to keep one eye closed in mental reservation while reading much of the Washington material these days.

The real decisions will come when the boss returns.

White Meat

As interesting a scrap as any is the one between the federal trade commission and the commerce department over the white meat on the old Blue Eagle. That is an old scrap which has lately been renewed.

A certain eminent carver for the administration would cut the bird up into two parts. One would be administrative and the other judicial (something like the old Johnson idea). The administrative end would be given to the Commerce Department. Any disputes would be tried before the judicial body, called the national code administration. The federal trade commission would get nothing. Existing NRA boards would be abolished or at least reorganized into the new setup.

It sounds like a good idea and there are indications that the general theory is acceptable to Mr. Richberg as well as to Commerce Department officials. No decision has been made.

Balloon

Authoritative New Deal balloons floated in the last six weeks by the boss himself, or under his confidential supervision, have met mixed winds.

The inside on that situation now might be thumbnailed fairly as follows:

LABOR—Roper's speech calling for union guarantees of the right to work. Swatted by labor. Wide-spread favorable letter reaction from business. Something on it may be worked out. No decision.

PUBLIC WORKS—The $12,000,000

600,000 PWA program was shot down before it got off the ground and is now out on the junk pile of broken dreams. A much more conservative plan is being formulated.

UTILITIES—The Walsh report and Mr. Roosevelt's Tupelo speech frightened the power companies out of their wits. Utilities stock went down foolishly, because the St. Lawrence project cannot possibly be completed for ten years, if then.

NRA—Richberg's speeches advocating discontinuance of price fixing, as well as production control, brought encouraging reaction. Matter probably will be worked out on general lines outlined above.

AAA—Chester Davis' speeches advocating eventual discontinuance of scarcity idea were snowed under by farm demands for continuance of existing government subsidies for curtailment. The farmers have won for the present.

Most returning congressmen favor a congressional investigation of relief and Public Works Administration, not as a graft hunt, but as a sincere effort to develop the best policy for those two agencies. An investigation is inevitable. The administration may take hold of it, so the opposition cannot conduct it.

By JAMES McMULLIN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The steel labor tangle is getting as involved as the plot of a detective thriller. Two things have happened which would have seemed impossible a few months ago. U. S. Steel unbent so far as to offer recognition of Federation unions and the government privately but definitely went to bat with labor in support of the steelmakers' proposition. Yet these miracles—instead of saving the situation as intended—have actually made it worse and brought a widespread and dangerous strike measurably closer. Here's the how and why.

This latest chapter began with an effort by Mayor Taylor—Chairman of U. S. Steel—to contribute to the President's labor truce. Against the opposition of stiffer-necked associates he committed the industry's largest corporation to deal with the dreaded "outside" unions under certain reservations. Four-fifths of the industry's productive capacity would have followed this leadership if the offer had been accepted.

Hitherto the steel magnates have unanimously viewed the Amalgamated with the same affection that a chicken fancier feels for a raiding hawk. Therefore the two motives behind U. S. Steel's conciliatory gesture were caught instantly. One was a desire to prove to FDR that the company is genuinely anxious to aid recovery by promoting industrial peace. The other was a subtle attempt to strengthen company unions against Amalgamated inroads. If the Federation had accepted the proffer—with its stipulation of no formal contracts—it would have paved the way for proportional representation as practical in the motor industry. In effect the corporation was trying to swap recognition of Amalgamated for the latter's implied acquiescence in the right of company unions to exist on a permanent basis.

Salvation

Federation officials refused to rise to the bait because they spotted the concealed hook. The government—as represented by the steel labor relations board—intervened to urge acceptance. Its main object all along has been to achieve a peaceful solution of a thorny problem and naturally it warmly supported a move which seemed to offer the only hope of reaching that elusive goal.

But labor board pressure only stiffened labor resistance to U. S. Steel's overtures. New York understands that labor leaders now feel the government has taken sides with the company. This has strengthened their conviction that their salvation depends solely on themselves and whets the demand for direct action.

Impatient

What next? No strike immediately—but preparations on both sides will be intensified. The steel labor board will try to assert its authority by staging an impartial election for collective bargaining representatives in the Duquesne plant of Carnegie Steel.

But you can't hold such an election without a list of qualified voters. The only source for an acceptable list is the company's payroll record—which the company will not hand over. If the board tries to subpoena it the company will resist in the courts on the grounds that the board has no power to do so under the law.

The informed figure it will take close to a year before legal machinery can grind out a final decision. That means no election in the interim—which is all to the good from the industry's viewpoint. By then the original NRA charter will have expired and congress will have enacted new laws which may change the picture completely. Meanwhile the legal suspense is more than likely to be broken by labor elements impatient for action.

Cake

It will be okay with New York if the building trades are made the guinea pig for the annual wage experiment instead of the motor industry. Conservatives feel—if it must be tried—the ideal spot is an industry which has powerful government assistance in smoothing out the rough spots of variable seasonal demand. They also hope and believe that the fallacies in the theory will soon become apparent once it's put into practice—thus saving other businesses from the same ordeal.

Industrial leaders are also intrigued by reports that labor will accept a smaller hourly wage in return for a guaranteed annual income. They figure any break in the high wage dike—no matter how caused—will give them the long awaited opening to drive for lower labor costs. The smart boys are already trying to dope out a way to cut wages and cake without having to swallow the annual wage pill at the same time.

Time

Rumors the Securities and Exchange Commissioners Kennedy, Landis and Matthews have "gone over to Wall Street" because they approved the Northern States Power bond issue while Pecora and Healy held out for amendments in the company's registration statement are the bunk.

The time element was the determining factor in the decision. The delay in refunding operations would have caused a default. Insiders learn the majority of the commission felt it would be unfair to put the company in the hole because of a comparatively trivial question of accounting. Financial men regard the commission's refusal to make a life-and-death issue of a technicality as evidence of its sincere intent to help things along. Corporate financing is just beginning to show signs of life and an adverse decision in the Northern States case would have squelched them completely.

Suspicious

Apparently Richard Whitney overshoot the mark when he tried to contribute to the new harmony by lavishing praise on exchange regulation. Brokers with branch offices through the country report a public reaction of suspicion to all this love-and-kisses stuff and predict that the SEC will hear about it from congress.

A New Yorker remarks that the reaction is natural. "Wouldn't you think it a trifle odd if a motorist who had been pinched for speeding started praising motorcycle cops?" (Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Let Them All Build

JAPAN INFORMS the United States that she will "denounce," which is the diplomatic expression for "terminating" the Washington naval treaty, that compels Japan to have a smaller war fleet than that of the United States or England, the latter two nations being equal. Japan decides that she is disgraced by such a treaty, and will be bound by it no longer.

Nobody in the United States will object to Japan building as many warships as she chooses, for three reasons.

In the first place, a battleship will be merely a target for airplanes in modern war, unlike swift cruisers that can annoy a nation's floating commerce.

Second, the Japanese are wise, and they would not direct their warships toward our coast, except on some friendly errand.

Third, this country can build at any time as many battleships as it chooses, if it is foolish enough to do so.

The nation hopes it will build plenty of airships and submarines, to sink enemy ships from above, and blow them up from below.

$100,000 for 3 ft. 3

"A DEAR little lady," height 3 feet 3 inches, weight 55 pounds, sees a gentleman 5 feet 3 inches, weight 150 pounds, for $100,000. She wants balm for laceration of her feelings following her discovery that the gentleman, despite undying protestations, etc., was married, had a family.

The gentleman's lawyer hopes to convince the jury that a lady only three feet tall should get only half as much heart balm as a full-sized lady. The midjet, Miss Sutton, says that three feet three can suffer as much anguish as six feet six, or any other size. All this is news, because midjets so rarely bring breach of promise suits.

Our Trade Balance

AGAIN THERE is cheerful news. United States exports since October were highest in three years. Uncle Sam sold $206,352,000 worth of goods to other countries, and spent with other countries $76,723,000 less than he took in.

That is called a "favorable trade balance," and is supposed to be a good thing.

MANY LETTERS TO SANTA TRICKLE THROUGH MAILS

To make sure that Santa Claus will not forget their children of East Liverpool and environs have already started their barrage of letters to the North pole.

Every day, in increasing numbers, letters from those needing help reach the postoffice where they are sent to their proper destination. Postmaster Ralph C. Benedum said today.

Civic and other agencies assisting Santa Claus in his work in this community check the letters to make sure that every little boy and girl will not be missed on Christmas morning. Fathers and mothers of the writers discover longings of their little ones when return addresses are written on the envelopes.

In cases where Santa's admirers cannot afford to pay three cents postage they will send a penny or two for postal cards to carry their messages.

Suggests Treatment For Frostbite And Other Winter Ailments

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

When cold weather is ushered in unexpectedly we are sometimes caught unprepared for the many dangers of winter. A common and often serious accident of marked exposure to cold is frost-bite.

If a part of the skin is exposed to cold, nature withdraws as much blood as possible from that portion of the body. The skin becomes pale, stiff and brittle. The involved parts may become gangrenous, with actual death of the frost-bitten tissues.

When the frozen part of the body begins to thaw, blood again flows through the capillaries and small blood vessels. The immediate return of the blood is painful. If the sufferer has exposed himself unwisely to warmth, a sudden return of blood may cause great swelling and further destruction of the involved tissues.

For this reason it is always advisable to resort to a gradual thawing out process. As a rule the application of ice or snow is recommended. Cold cloths are more beneficial and are applied after being wrung out of cold water. A good plan is to rub the skin for a few moments and then apply the cold cloth for the next few minutes. The temperature of the water in which the cloths are soaked can gradually be increased so that eventually it becomes lukewarm.

If you have been exposed to cold, do not go at once into a warm room. Persons often make the mistake of rushing to the fireside or steam radiator, in an attempt to warm their feet and hands. This is a common way of increasing the bad effects of a severe frost-bite of the toes and fingers. Approach the warm spot gradually and only after you have been indoors a while.

Frost-bite is characterized by redness, swelling and some tenderness of the exposed area. The symptoms are different in severe forms of frost-bite. The involved skin is firm or rigid and without color. There is little or no feeling present. This form of frost-bite requires the utmost care.

Carelessness often leads to a disturbance of the nerves and blood vessels of the involved part. This condition is spoken of as "chilblains." It is brought on by repeated exposure to cold and is characterized by itching and burning of the involved part of the skin. In many instances blisters occur.

Severe forms of frost-bite should be looked after by a physician or person well acquainted with this affliction. Various methods of treatment have been perfected by people living in cold countries.

Beneficial results have been obtained by the so-called "paraffin" method of treatment, particularly for those persons who have had repeated attacks of frost-bite. The treatment will be explained by your doctor who will give them three times a week. The use of the ultra-violet ray is sometimes resorted to in an effort to build up the resistance of the body against this sensitivity to cold.

Church Grew From Sunday School
The Emmanuel church grew out of a Sunday school that had its beginning in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Thompson and later moved to a building erected on the West Side of St. Clair avenue by Will L. Thompson. The Sunday school was formally organized there, with John C. Thompson as the first superintendent.

Rev. Dr. E. M. McMillen, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. W. H. Clark, former pastor of the Calcutta United Presbyterian church, preached there occasionally. Plans then were made for a new chapel and Will L. Thompson deeded a lot on Park boulevard. Others donated toward the construction of the edifice, which was completed in September, 1907, at a cost of $7,500. Of this amount, $4,500 was given by interested persons and the rest was obtained from a local bank. This $3,000 was later paid out of the estate of Will L. Thompson, who also gave the church the name, "Emmanuel."

Church Organized in 1909
The church proper was organized by the Steubenville presbytery Dec. 2, 1909, with 82 charter members. Rev. Joseph Grimm became the first pastor on June 2, 1910, and served until Jan. 29, 1912. The congregation was then served by supplies until Rev. W. H. Clark became pastor Jan. 3, 1915. He was in church until his death 10 years later. The pulpit was vacant for nine months, after which Rev. Walker was installed Oct. 1, 1926.

A manse was erected adjacent to the church in 1928, costing $14,000. About $1,000 was expended last fall repainting and redecorating the manse.

The church now has 234 members, of whom 159 were received during the present pastorate. The Sunday school enrollment is 200 and other groups include an active Women's Missionary society, Ladies Aid society, Christian Endeavor society of 35 members and a Boy Scout troop of 20 youths.

RWD JOBS PUT 200 TO WORK

Street Projects Under Way in Midland; $38,000 Cost.

Approximately 200 men are at work today on Midland's two RWD projects, according to Beaver County Director Robert W. Smith at Beaver. One of the projects, which was started last week with about 80 men at work, calls for a slag macadam re-construction on six streets.

The other project, which was placed under way Monday, according to Mr. Smith, with about 120 men at work, calls for re-laying of brick pavement on the following streets: Penn avenue, from Fifth street to Park Place West; Fifth street, from Railroad lane to Ohio avenue; Twelfth street, from Wood lane to Ohio avenue; Ohio avenue, west of Fourth street.

The slag macadam reconstruction is planned as follows: Wood lane, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets; Thirteenth street; Railroad lane, from Fifth street west; Virginia avenue, between Fourth and Sixth streets; Ohio avenue, from Virginia avenue west; Third street, between Midland avenue and Railroad lane.

All of the work is to be done by men on relief lists under the supervision of Borough Engineer R. E. Steebner. The borough will pay for the materials used and furnish tools and other equipment, while the wages will be paid from relief funds.

Mr. Smith said the two Midland projects call for a total expenditure of approximately $38,000.

Coming Attractions

The pictureization of Jim Tully's "Laughter in Hell", headlines the American theater's double-feature program for Friday and Saturday. Completing the bill is a Hoot Gibson western, "The Fighting Parson", in which the star is supported by Marceline Day, Robert Frazer, Stanley Blystone and Bill Robinson.

The action of "Laughter in Hell" is laid in the south where a stalwart Irish youth and his father are bound very close together with the memories of the wife and mother who is in her grave. The son realizes his ambition to become a railroad engineer and marries a bewitching Southern girl who proves unfaithful. Catching her in the arms of his enemy since childhood, the maddened husband kills them both and is sentenced for his crime to hard labor in the state chain gang whose foreman is the brother of the man he killed. Here he endures tortures of soul and body at the hands of the vindictive brother until his chance to escape arrives, and he takes it. From there the story moves swiftly with a maximum of suspense and action until the fugitive finds belated happiness.

Pat O'Brien in the authentic role of the Irish youth surpasses anything this talented actor has yet done on the screen for sheer power of characterization. Merna Kennedy is altogether seductive in a part which welcomes this talented actress back to her proper place on the screen. Bertie Churchill, Gloria Stuart and Tom Brown give polished performance.

News and Gossip of the Stage and Screen

BOHM PRESENTATION ENHANCES CHANCE OF SCREEN OPERA

Doris Kenyon and Nelson Eddy Appear In Feature.

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Aside from the fact that Doris Kenyon and Nelson Eddy of the movies were on the same program, there was interest for Hollywood in the local presentation of Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, "The Golden Cockerel."

Miss Kenyon and Eddy appeared in a one-act opera, curtain-raiser for "Le Coq d'Or," and Hollywood turned out—including Greta Garbo—for the occasion.

A local opera season, however brief, naturally enhanced discussions of opera on the screen, and on this night there was opportunity to speculate on a type of screen opera often suggested—one in which the singers perform off-screen while the assumably prettier and handsomer players go through the motions in camera view.

"Le Coq d'Or" is such an opera, the ballet pantomiming the action while singers on platforms to the side of the stage deliver the vocal accompaniment.

Nelson Eddy, asked for his opinion of operatic pictures, some time ago suggested such a scheme as the feasible means of adapting opera to the screen. Of course, Hollywood's only interest in opera to date has been in romances about opera singers, with scenes from their "triumphs" worked into the story, thus introducing the music.

But Adolph Bohm, the ballet master who staged the local production, has told friends he would like to put "Le Coq d'Or" into films. Should this develop into an actual production plan — admittedly it would be daring, despite the libretto in English—film opera would be given a substantial test for the first time.

"One Night of Love," proponents of the idea point out, merely proved that good singing and good music interpolated in an amusing story are "box-office." It proved nothing about the drawing power of opera as such.

Advance indications on "Cavalleria Rusticana" as a debut vehicle for Mary Ellis are that the "One Night of Love" formula will play some part in the production, although the original setting and the libretto—in Italian—will be used. The plot will necessarily be expanded, and other "box-office" qualities added.

Grace Moore's new film is to be a story with operatic music, and Lily Pons, due at R. K. O., has no definite plans made for her as yet, but under consideration is one, not an opera, that would require her to demonstrate her voice incidentally, as Miss Moore did in "One Night of Love."

The nation's movie-going public is hailing a new star team appearing in First National's "Happiness Ahead," opening Thursday at the Ceramic theater. It is composed of Dick Powell and Josephine Hutchinson, the young lady who leaped to screen stardom from New York's Civic Repertory theater.

Goo-Goo, radioland's most famous stooge, comes to the films with its master, Joe Penner, in Paramount's "College Rhythm," opening Thursday at the Columbia theater. Penner heads an all-star cast including Lanny Ross, Jack Oakie, Helen Mack and Lyda Roberti.

STAGE SHOW AT STATE THURSDAY

In addition to the screen offering, "Anne of Green Gables," starring Anne Shirley, the State theater will present on its stage the clever trio of Mary, Isabelle and Buddy Daly, on Thanksgiving day only.

The stage feature will be presented three times on the holiday, once in the afternoon and twice at night.

Coming Attractions

American

The pictureization of Jim Tully's "Laughter in Hell", headlines the American theater's double-feature program for Friday and Saturday. Completing the bill is a Hoot Gibson western, "The Fighting Parson", in which the star is supported by Marceline Day, Robert Frazer, Stanley Blystone and Bill Robinson.

The action of "Laughter in Hell" is laid in the south where a stalwart Irish youth and his father are bound very close together with the memories of the wife and mother who is in her grave. The son realizes his ambition to become a railroad engineer and marries a bewitching Southern girl who proves unfaithful. Catching her in the arms of his enemy since childhood, the maddened husband kills them both and is sentenced for his crime to hard labor in the state chain gang whose foreman is the brother of the man he killed. Here he endures tortures of soul and body at the hands of the vindictive brother until his chance to escape arrives, and he takes it. From there the story moves swiftly with a maximum of suspense and action until the fugitive finds belated happiness.

Pat O'Brien in the authentic role of the Irish youth surpasses anything this talented actor has yet done on the screen for sheer power of characterization. Merna Kennedy is altogether seductive in a part which welcomes this talented actress back to her proper place on the screen. Bertie Churchill, Gloria Stuart and Tom Brown give polished performance.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S TABLETS

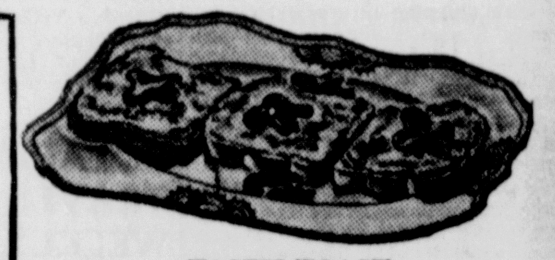

A Uterine Tonic and Sedative for Women

"For frying, it's vital to use digestible Crisco," says Mrs. Quinn

CRISCO-fried foods aren't greasy—they digest quickly

Mrs. Mary Quinn keeps house for her son, her sister and a brother who travels a great deal. "My brother James eats fried foods when he is home because I always fry with Crisco," says Mrs. Quinn. "For the past 5 years I have been using Crisco steadily for frying, biscuits and pie crust. I feel responsible for giving my family digestible food. Last winter my son was ill and the doctor warned him to be careful of his digestion, but he never had any trouble with my Crisco-fried potatoes!"

TASTY TOAST

this is so easy to make, it flies to the tablet

2 eggs 1 1/2 cups left-over minced ham
1/2 cup milk 1/2 teaspoon table mustard
1/4 teaspoon salt 6 slices bread
4 to 6 tablespoons Crisco for frying

Beat eggs lightly, add milk and salt. Dip thick slices of bread in mixture. Melt plenty of wholesome, digestible Crisco in skillet, when hot add bread and fry until toasty brown on both sides. Mix minced ham with mustard and spread over surface of toast. Place in hot oven long enough to heat thoroughly. Garnish with currant jelly just before serving.

CHEESE PUFFS

a luncheon treat that's light and digestible

1 cup grated cheese paprika
1/4 cup soft bread crumbs 1 egg
1/4 teaspoon Worcester- 1/4 teaspoon salt
shire sauce Crisco for deep frying

Separate egg. Mix crumbs with yolk. Add cheese and seasonings. Fold in stiffly beaten egg-white. Shape into 10 balls and roll in fine dry bread crumbs. Drop into deep digestible Crisco heated to 375°F. (or until a piece of bread will brown in 60 seconds). Fry until golden brown, drain on absorbent paper. Serve with strips of grilled bacon. These cheese puffs are so light and crispy when fried in Crisco, the digestible fat. Remember, too, that Crisco can be used over and over again for frying—it keeps digestible.

All Measurements Level—Crisco is the registered trade-mark of a shortening manufactured by The Procter & Gamble Co.

HINTS ON DEEP-FRYING

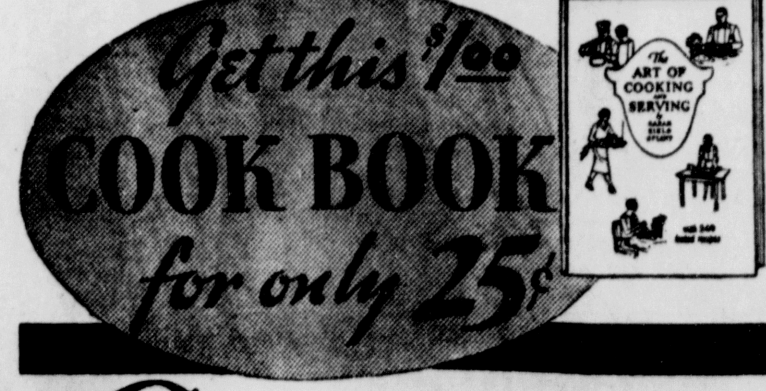

—with Crisco, the quick-digesting fat

You don't need a big deep-frying kettle when you use sweet digestible Crisco. Use a deep saucepan.

You don't need pounds and pounds of Crisco. Fill the saucepan 1/2 full.

Never heat Crisco until it smokes, in the old-fashioned way. A fat that smokes easily is actually decomposing! Crisco does not smoke at proper frying temperatures. It keeps digestible.

Don't throw that Crisco away that you've used for a deep-frying. Strain it back into a can, and use that same Crisco for frying over and over again. Crisco stays digestible!

NETHERLANDS FORGING AHEAD

Airplane Lines Show
Its Rapid Rise as Trade Nation.

'DUTCH' DROPPED
Country's Ocean Ships
Equal any Cruising
Seas.

By WILLIAM PARKER,
International News Service
Staff Correspondent
AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—A stolid people whose economic sun dropped below the horizon of history in the competitive affairs of the edged their way again into a position of wide world importance as a commercial nation.

It is the Netherlands and it took the England-Australia air race to arouse new interest abroad in this small country which now looms big in the competitive affair of the world.
The achievement of the Netherlands entries—although a Douglas plane made in America was used by the fliers who finished second —has drawn attention to the progress the Netherlands have made in aviation. Their far flung possessions are now effectively tied to the motherland by air lines.
The fliers who finished second were drawn from among regular commercial pilots, and the Douglas was one purchased by the Royal Dutch Air Lines for use in regular passenger service.

Other Nations on Defensive Netherlands commercial activity has placed other nations with extensive colonial possessions on the defensive. Holland itself has only 13,208 square miles of area, with a population less than that of Metropolitan New York, but it has 800,000 square miles of possessions with a total population of 60,000-600. Its possessions are rich producers of oil, rubber and other products.

The quick flight of the Netherlands fliers from England to Australia gave the Dutch colonies renewed assurance of the mother country's ability to protect them
by air.

An indication of the new commercial spirit in the Netherlands is the new governmental decree that the word "Dutch" no longer should have official recognition in governmental documents because it was being confused with "Deutsch," which means German. From now on even the "Dutch East Indies" is to be known as "The Netherlands East Indies," and the word "Netherlands" is to be substituted for the "Dutch" in such names in Royal Dutch Air Lines, Royal Dutch Petroleum Co., etc.

Control Radio Business
Not much is heard about Dutch ocean-going liners, but for their size and for seaworthiness they equal any cruising the seven seas.
British shipping interests have already launched an extensive program of shipbuilding to compete with small, light draught Dutch steamers which have made serious inroads on British shipping trade in the large and small ports of the British Isles.

Holland, it was recalled, held the shipping supremacy of the world up to the middle of the 17th century when it went to war against England. Thereafter Holland as a maritime nation appeared destined for perpetual eclipse. But in the years since the World War, while other European nations have centered interest more on politics, the peaceful Dutch have been gradually forging ahead.

The Dutch practically control the radio manufacturing business of Europe, and it is being predicted, International News was told, that they are ambitious now to control airplane carrying commerce also.

NOBLE DIVORCES SYLVIA HAWKES; FAIRBANKS PAYS

By The United Press.
LONDON, Nov. 28.—Lord Ashley was granted a divorce today from Lady Ashley and costs of the action were assessed against Douglas Fairbanks Sr., named as correspondent.

The decree, which gives the young nobleman a final divorce
after six months if contrary case is not shown, was handed down shortly after the case came before Sir Boyd Merriam. The suit was not defended and services of a jury were not required.

Lady Ashley is the former Sylvia
Hawkes, musical comedy actress.
The court action today required exactly eight minutes. Neither Lady Ashley nor Fairbanks was in court
but Lord Ashley, smartly attired, was there.

The nobleman charged misconduct.

Lawyers said it would require several days to fix the costs of the case, which Fairbanks is to pay, but estimated the figure probably will be about $10,000.

BYRNS, RAYBURN SETTING PACE IN SPEAKER FIELD

in the lead, with Bankhead of Alabama pulling far ahead of a field of dark horses.

The terrific pace indicates an early decision, although the ac-

INGRAM QUILTS COACHING POST IN CALIFORNIA

By The Associated Press.
BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 28.—
William "Navy Bill" Ingram became a private business man today while into his shoes as head football coach at the University of California stepped Leonard B.
"Stub" Allison, a former star player at Carleton college, Northfield, Minn.

In a shift so sudden that it surprised even Allison, the executive committee of the Associated Students accepted Ingram's resignation last night and promptly appointed the man who has been his first assistant for four years: Ingram's resignation stated that he was accepting "a wonderful opportunity to become settled in private business life."

Ingram, who came to California four years ago from the head coaching position at the United States Naval Academy, made no mention in his resignation of recent grumbling among undergraduate and alumni groups over his team's defeats during the season.

NRA FINDS FAULT IN ACCOUNTING OF FUEL BOARD

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The NRA has found fault with the accounting methods of the Ohio Retail Solid Fuel code authority.

W. A. Harriman, NRA administrative officer, after meeting with members of the authority yesterday, announced that "There were several instances of careless handling and accounting of expenditures, but none to warrant any summary action with respect to the code authority."

Hiram S. Brown, special assistant to the administrative offices on code budgets, said that expenditures under the $140,000 Ohio budget had been studied.

FANS LIKELY TO SEE WIDE-OPEN GAME THURSDAY

Colorful Struggle Predicted

Potters Have Big Advantage in Weight; Tickets Moving.

By ROBERT ELLIOTT, Sports Editor, The Review
With only a 30-year-old tradition to attract them, a crowd of more than 5,000 fans is expected to throng Patterson field here tomorrow afternoon for the 23rd meeting on the gridiron of football teams representing East Liverpool and Wellsville high schools.

Fischer Grid Pictures

The pictures of the East Liverpool and Wellsville high school football teams which appeared in Tuesday's Review were taken by the Fischer studio in East Fifth street.

Even if the spring-like weather of the last few days continues. Even in the event of colder weather, the crowd can be reasonably expected to "net" a paid attendance of around $2,000.

Both teams are out to make up mediocre seasons in the holiday classic and the fans are more than likely in for an exhibition of wide-open football, with plenty of forward and lateral passes and wide end sweeps.

Wellsville has been working behind closed gates all week, but information that has leaked out, would have you believe the Bengals have prepared an entire new offense for the Potters, one that will give Captain Bob Morrison ample opportunity to display his forward-passing prowess.

The Potters have used an extensive passing game practically all season with a pair of better-than-average tossers in Bud Steffen and Dick Booth can be reasonably expected to fill the ozone with forward passes during most of the contest.

This apparently wide-open program, plus all the fanfare that accompanies an East Liverpool-Wellsville encounter should make a colorful struggle. The hands of both schools will be on hand to enter before the game and between halves.

The rival coaches were apparently settled on the starting lineups at the head of this story.

If these teams do start the game, it means the Ceramists will have a decided weight advantage of 13 pounds to a man. The starting Potters City team averages 165 pounds as compared to the Bengals' 152. The local line and backfield averages 162 and 169 pounds, respectively, with the corresponding Wellsville averages of 151 and 153 pounds.

Only seven of the 22 starting players have ever seen action in a previous East Liverpool-Wellsville game. These are Captain Bob Morrison, Bill Connell and Jimmy Anderson of Wellsville, and Frank Lovas, Herb Brand, Orville

The season's records of the rival teams reveal exactly nothing. The Potters have scored only 45 points to the opposition's 94. The Bengals have counted 83 points, 29 of them against Sebring, as compared to their opponents' combined total of 78.

Four Common Foes

Those fans who would make the Bengals the favorite point to the fact that Wellsville beat Sebring to a 6-6 tie, while the Quakers upset the Potters, 14-6. To refute this, local backers point to Wellsville's 12-0 defeat by Lisbon, a team which was trounced, 9-0 by East Liverpool.

Both teams defeated Toronto by the same score, 12-0. East Palestine, the only other team met by both Wellsville and East Liverpool, held the Bengals to a scoreless deadlock but dropped a 12-6 verdict to the Ceramists.

The kickoff is billed for 2:30, with the gates scheduled to open about two hours before game-time. It was announced that good seats will be plentiful at the stadium. The season records of the two teams follow:

East Liverpool: 12. East Palestine 6; 9. Lisbon 0; 6. New Philadelphia 9; 12. Toronto 0; 6. Salem 14; 0. Midland 25; 0. Youngstown Chaney 6; 0. Martins Ferry 19; 0. Belleaire 15.

Championship Wooster Eleven Places Three on All-Ohio Team

STARS FELL ON 'BAMA DURING 1934 FOOTBALL SEASON

By KENNETH GREGORY (Associated Press Sports Writer)

UNIVERSITY, Ala. — Fact and fancy are building a high road westward from Alabama—and it's illuminated by Rose Bowl reflections.

Fact's tools are the record books which serve to recall that the great Crimson Tide has swept eight successive challengers down to defeat and only one opponent—waker, if you believe the statistics—stands in the way of an unbeaten season.

No other team geographically eligible to represent the east, has such an impressive record save Minnesota—and Minnesota is barred from post-season games by Big Ten conference rules.

Best Ever, Maybe! Fancy's tools are the great public favor that usually accompanies success in any guise, and the opinions of many experts is that 'Bama's team is the most powerful the south has ever known.

Busy with preparations for the final game with Vanderbilt Thanksgiving Day, Alabama is sawing wood and saying nothing. But just the same, it is known receptive ears are waiting for the invitation from the Pacific coast's host team to the annual tournament of Roses at Pasadena.

Alabama would be no stranger on the coast, for its record in Rose Bowl competition has never been equaled by any other team. Three Times the Tide rolled over Pasadena field and it came out without tasting defeat.

Can't Beat 'Em! The great Alabama eleven of 1925 conquered the University of Washington 20 to 19. The following year 'Bama's Red Elephants battled Stanford—Pacific champion this season—to a 7-7 tie. And then in 1930 the Tide swamped Washington State 24 to 0.

Wallace Wade, who is now turning out football teams at Duke, coached the Crimson Tide during those western invasions. But Frank Thomas, former Notre Dame quarterback, is at the helm now.

Some observers say this year's eleven is superior to any other produced at Alabama. With few exceptions, it is the same team that won the Southeastern conference championship last year.

Thus far this season the 'Bama powerhouse has run up 253 points against the total of 32 made by its eight opponents — Howard, Sewanee, Mississippi State, Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, Clemson and Georgia Tech.

If Alabama receives the invitation to play in the annual Tournament of Roses at Pasadena New Year's day, this band of hefty young men will carry the hopes of the East. Left to right in the backfield: Jim Angelich, halfback; Joe Demyanovich, fullback; Riley Smith, quarterback; Millard (Dixie) Howell, halfback. Line, left to right; Paul Bryant, end; Captain Bill Lee, tackle; Bob Morrow, guard; Kavanaugh Francis, center; Charlie Marr, guard; James Whitley tackle; Don Hutson, end.

Good Ol' Dixie! For comparison, it can be noted that Alabama whipped Georgia 26 to 6. The same Georgia team trounced Yale 14 to 0 and the same Yale team blasted Princeton from the national list of unbeaten and untied teams.

The Crimson Tide's success this season, so Thomas says, is due to the "exceptionally fine spirit." He declared he had never seen "a finer, harder working group of players in all my coaching career."

Co-ordination of a great line and a versatile backfield are other reasons for the victorious assaults engineered by the Thomas gridgers.

In the person of Millard (Dixie) Howell, 165 pounds of football energy, Alabama has one of the greatest triple-threat stars in the nation. He passes accurately, averages more than 40 yards with his kicks and is unusually deceptive as a ball carrier.

While Howell is the sparkplug of the offense, he is supported by rugged and aggressive linemen and a speedy, powerful group of backs.

Has Everything! A sophomore, Riley Smith, handles the quarterback chores and Thomas ranks him highly. For one thing, he has kicked 19 extra points during the season. He has missed only five.

Joe Demyanovich, the fullback, is a line buster and a stalwart on defense.

And great ball carriers are Jim Angelich, a senior, and Joe Riley, a sophomore.

Alabama's line averages around 260 pounds from end to end. The outstanding members are Don Hutson, left end, who is one of the fastest players in Dixie and a flawless pass catcher; Captain Bill Lee, a bulky tackle; and Charlie Marr, a rugged guard.

Thomas uses the Notre Dame system.

Robert at Center This quartet of backs ran up 145 points during the season, Harper counting 60, Tallafiero 49, and the others 18 each.

At the ends are Al Tanner of Wooster and Ward Powell of Baldwin-Wallace, both over six feet tall and near the 200 mark. The tackles are tall and rangy. Peter Harno of Baldwin-Wallace and Albert Baister of Muskingum, each weighing more than 190.

The guards are heavy enough to plug the gaps, and fast enough to come out to help on interference, each weighing about 170. They are Earl Hensal of Akron and Bob Lindsay of Heidelberg. Dick Roberts of Mt. Union, who tips the scales at 180, gets the center job.

Just nosing out Ralph Clelan, Ashland's stout five-inch giant.

The first string backfield is a "pony" one. Artale weighing but 145, and the others between 160 and 164. All four are kickers and passers. The tallest of the backfield, Gedeon, is but five feet eight and one-half inches.

One feature of the balloting was that Ohio Northern, undefeated and unscored on in the conference; Denison, also undefeated in the league; Toledo, Xavier, Dayton and several other strong eleven's failed to be represented on the first team. Denison was the only one of the group to make the second team.

Balloting Close This, in a way, is a tribute to the team play of those squads, no one player standing out sufficiently over the others to warrant his selection.

The balloting was close for several positions, but except for the center post the first team members had a clear-cut margin. Roberts nosed out Clelan by one ballot. Several of those in the honorable mention list felt just a vote or two short of landing on the second team, indicating that the talent was fairly evenly divided.

Of the first team Roberts, Lindsay and Tallafiero are sophomores, Hensal and Powell are juniors, the others are seniors.

The second team: Ends—Robert Seale of Heidelberg and William Scopol of John Carroll; tackles — Fred Cruickshank of Wooster and Steve Guley of John Carroll; guards—Chester Sokoloski of Kent and Stanley Almon of Case; center—Ralph Clelan of Ashland; backs—Paul Boheman extraction and was known perhaps more widely for his shuttling ability than for his football playing in high school. He has a mark of 51 feet some odd inches with the 12 pound shot in high school and won the state championship. For his weight and general build he can run remarkably fast and seems to have improved his speed under Bierman's coaching.

The weights of Minnesota's starting lineup is as follows: Tenner, left end, 200; Wisdeth, left tackle, 216; Oech, left guard, 190; Rennebohm, center, 180; Bevan, right guard, 192; Bengtson, right tackle, 210; Larson, right end, 185; Seidel, quarterback, 185; Lund, left half, 185; Beise, fullback, 192; Kostka, 208; Julie Alfonsen, right half, 180.

Another subject that seems to be troubling some of the gridiron observers, down around the Washington-Baltimore district, is the high rating of the Navy's great team to the implied submerging of Western Maryland and George Washington for sectional prominence.

From several sources I have the expressed and published opinion that both are stronger than the Navy, although there is no immediate way of proving it.

Were one to read only the jottings from New York columnists, one would think the Navy is the only big-time football team in this area," writes a Washington fan. "Why, that is laughable! Not only do local 'wise ones' rate Western Maryland and George Washington in advance of Navy but with Catholic University and the Tars about even.

Also, in Tuffy Leemans, George Washington has the best backfield in this region, Buzz Borries of the Navy not excepted."

MT. VERNON IN LEAGUE By The Associated Press. GALLON, O., Nov. 28. — Mount Vernon high school was voted unanimously into the North Central Ohio Athletic association, at a league meeting here. It is to be effective with the 1935 football season. Other members are Gallon, Mansfield, Marion, Shelby and Ashland.

Pitt Gets Five On Selection

All-eastern Eleven Selected by AP Experts.

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, Nov. 28. — Pittsburgh's Panthers, dominating the all-star setting as they did the eastern gridirons, today captured five places in the 1934 All-Eastern eleven chosen for The Associated Press annually by eastern football experts.

The reaction of those who have seen the mighty Pitt juggernaut roll through Washington and Jefferson, West Virginia, Southern California, Notre Dame, Navy and Nebraska, and alone of the nation's eleven force Minnesota to the utmost, is simple. The wonder is that Pitt didn't win all eleven places.

The eastern honor roll places the Panther center trio of Captain Charles Hartwig and Ken Ormiston at the guards and George Shotwell at center. Miller Munjas, clever field general, passer and probably the best kicker in the country, directs the team at quarterback. Burly Isadore Weinstein, who fractured every line he faced at one time or another, completes the quintet at fullback.

Navy's light but alert eleven, snowed under by Pitt, gained two places for its outstanding star, fleet Fred Borries at one of the halves, and big Slade Cutler, in one tackle berth. Syracuse, Colgate, Fordham and Army contributed a man each—the Orange placing Jim (Big Six) Steen at tackle, Colgate, one end in Joe Bogdanski, Fordham the other in Captain Lester Borden, and Army to the other halfback in clever Jack Buckler.

The second team choices: Ends: Larry Kelley, Yale, and Ed Purey, Columbia; tackles: E. Harvey, Holy Cross, and Lew Brooke, Colgate; guards: Robert Stillman, Army, and Robert Gundlach, Harvard; center: Mose Kalbaugh, Princeton; quarter: Kats Kadlic, Princeton; halves: Bill Shepherd, West Maryland, and Garry Levan, Princeton; fullback: Dave Smukler, Temple.

NEW YEAR'S DAY BATTLE PLANNED The Car Barn Heathens, East End grid team, are negotiating with Johnstown, Pa., for a game at Columbian park on New Year's day. In their last start, the Heathens scored a touchdown in the first period to down Beechwood, 6-0. J. Fone tallied on a 60-yard end sweep.

MAKE GOOD LEADERS COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 28.—Three of Coach Francis A. Schmidt's "Bucks"—that's the new name he'd rather have the Scarlet and Gray gridgers go by—today swept to new campus honors, at Ohio State university. Richard Heekin of Cincinnati was elected president of the senior class. The juniors elected Frank Fisch, Mansfield. Merle Wendt of Middletown, was elected sophomore president.

SIXTH STREET WINS The Sixth street school gridgers scored a 21-6 victory over Washington eleven Tuesday.

SPORT SLANTS

By Alan Gould

It seems that the reports about Stan Kostka either became magnified in filtering eastward or that our scouts used their imagination. Anyway the battering-ram fullback of Minnesota's Maulers doesn't weigh 232 pounds and to make it official we submit here with the ringside report of Les Etter, writing on behalf of the University of Minnesota News Service.

"As officially listed on our roster Kostka's weight is 210 pounds," writes Etter. "This was taken several weeks after the season was under way. Tuesday, as the result of an argument over his weight, Kostka's high school coach and myself asked him to step on the scales stripped after practice. His weight was 205½ pounds. As both of us had weighed ourselves on this scale previously we agreed that it was accurate. Felix Wold, the Associated Press correspondent on the campus, happened along and had Kostka step on the scales with the same result.

"We have a good-sized team and have no wish to conceal the fact but in the interests of accuracy and in fairness to Kostka I thought you might like to know the facts.

"Incidentally, he is of Polish Bohemian extraction and was known perhaps more widely for his shuttling ability than for his football playing in high school. He has a mark of 51 feet some odd inches with the 12 pound shot in high school and won the state championship. For his weight and general build he can run remarkably fast and seems to have improved his speed under Bierman's coaching.

Heaviest Man in Backfield Weighs Only 164 Pounds.

BY FRITZ HOWELL, Associated Press Sports Writer.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 28.—Speed and versatility in the backfield, rangy ends capable of snaring passes, and a fast and powerful forward wall are features of the 1934 Associated Press all-Ohio conference football team selected by the coaches, officials and sports writers of the state.

The backfield has Wooster's two star ball-toters, Don Harper, the leading scorer in the conference, and Bob Tallafiero, runner-up, paired with Salvatore Artale, John Carroll's 145-pound speed king, and Ray Gedeon, the plunging Baldwin-Wallace halfback.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

TABLOID TRUTHS

Next to keeping a pet leopard, keeping a diary is the most foolish and dangerous thing a woman can do. If a girl MUST keep a diary, she should write in it as cautiously and non-committally as a man writes a love-letter.

A good car may be as expensive as a wife, says the cynical Bachelor, but it can't answer back when you swear at it, and it never gets a red nose or a martyr-complex.

The chief difference between courtship and matrimony is that it's much easier to love a man who is gazing into your eyes across a dinner table at an expensive restaurant than it is to love one who is grumbling about the way you cooked his eggs, across the breakfast table.

Strange as it may seem, the more speed in a man's love-making, the more perfect his control in avoiding the temptation to commit himself.

The modern woman may scorn the ties and "dependence" of marriage, but she still seems to have a great respect for alimony.

At first, a man pays his alimony almost gladly—then reluctantly, then resentfully, and finally with all the enthusiasm of a man paying the back rent on an apartment he has vacated.

There are still lots of male writers and philosophers who insist that marriage is woman's highest vocation. Well, of course it is—but with the world full of non-marrying bachelors, all fighting manfully for their liberty, how is the average girl to rise to such "heights?"

Your friends may cheer you on—but there is no inspiration to brilliant achievement like a few good wholesome enemies who would love to see you go blab.

To the woman who loves him, a pudgy little runt is a "pocket-edition Adonis," and a two-hundred pound lump of protoplasm is a "Greek God." Beauty is in the eye of the beholder.

Six days of captivity will transform the wild elephant into a tame beast of burden.

Marian Gordon

by JEANNE BOWMAN

SYNOPSIS: To save Cliff Hendon's life and learn more of his reason for attempting suicide, Marian Gordon, reporter for the Morning Dispatch, and her editor pretend that Cliff's recently divorced wife, Silver, is going to marry him. Silver, however, is a play for Lon Casad, whom Marian loves. Marian, Lon and a friend are dining in Reno.

Chapter 13 SILVER AGAIN

"Would you like to stop dancing?" Lon inquired solicitously.

"No," she answered, "not ever."

"That's all right with me," Lon answered. "I might speak to the orchestra leader and suggest he arrange for relays of music."

"Be sensible," chided Marian, laughing.

"With you in my arms?" he queried, and he wasn't laughing. "Impossible." Then a few moments later, "I am, do you have to dance with Hamlin?"

"Of course, Lon, what a question to ask."

"Well I don't know that I like him."

"Yes you do."

"Yes, I know I do, but I'd like him better if he didn't make such a play for you."

"Lon, he doesn't," she smoothed an impulse to add, "not half so much as Silver made for you."

"Yes he does, and I don't blame him, but if he tries to wangle a ride home with us tomorrow I'm going to—"

Marian couldn't resist the next impulse—"have shattered nerves?" she suggested and was relieved that he laughed heartily.

"They danced on silently."

"I am, I'd like to keep on dancing for weeks."

"We might join a Walkathon," she suggested.

"I've got a better idea... oh, oh, that's the finish."

Marian danced with Hamlin next, a Hamlin who couldn't be roused to cheerfulness, despite the gay tone of the music.

"I feel guilty taking you out when you must be tired from last night's affair," he told her after several futile efforts to catch even a crooked smile.

"You needn't be," he said, then added a moment later, "I wish it were as easy to coach people in life, as it is on the stage. There you can tell them what to do to gain a desired effect, but in real life—" he shrugged his shoulders.

Marian paused. She had seen Silver.

"Do you feel that I need coaching?" she asked.

"How should I know," was his slightly weary answer, "and my coaching wouldn't help. I know, I was properly coached and see what a mess I made of things. We are alike in one thing, we do what we think is right regardless of consequences... and then we suffer. I read in a philosophical magazine recently that anyone could have anything they wanted if they were willing to take what went with it. Silver wants luxuries... she gets them, but rebels against the troubles that come with them. I wanted a certain kind of life, peace and beauty. I have it, but I've lost the love of my wife who wanted something else and was willing to pay the price, and you—"

"Yes?"

"You'll demand what you want without compromise. If you can't have it unqualified, you'll take loneliness and honor as barren substitutes." He laughed a little to soften his statement, then said, "but this music isn't the proper accompaniment for such nonsense... I think we'd better move along to our next stop after this dance."

They moved on to a huge barn, the silo converted into a bar, the stalls into private dining nooks. There was more food, more dancing.

When the hour was late enough they began a round of the casinos. Lon and Marian too engrossed in each other to appreciate the glamor.

Hamlin played recklessly, and won amazing sums of money. Lon played carefully and lost.

"Lucky in love," consoled Hamlin, and added "always win when I feel as I do tonight."

"I should think it would pay you to feel that way," remarked Lon.

"That's where the laugh comes in," the other man remarked, "I don't need the money now."

Marian understood. Now that his wife's desertion had created the bitterness which seemed to bring money in its wake, she wasn't there to share the one thing that would have held her loyal to him.

They had reached an imposing looking place, the entrance a maze of full length mirrors. Hamlin started to pilot Marian through the door swung open by a liveried attendant, then swiftly turned her about, but not before she had seen what he saw.

"Nothing much here," he was saying, "suppose we go where we can dance. And I imagine you'll be wanting to get back to your hotel early."

Marian had paused. To the others she seemed engaged in the purely feminine habit of primping before the most available mirror. In reality she was regarding the poise which had deserted her when she looked into the gaming room to see Silver Hendon, the center of a gay crowd, feverishly raking in a pile of colored chips.

Why had Hamlin turned away? Marian knew he had recognized Silver. Had he had Marian's interests at heart would he have done that, or would he have walked in to let Lon see for himself that this "poor little thing," as Lon had called her, was quite capable of forgetting a dying man who had been her husband, while she made merry with a crowd of friends?

Well, she could do it. She could insist upon seeing this famous rendezvous. She could show him the pink and tinsel-clad Silver, glowering over her winnings. Perhaps then he would understand why she had seemed so heartless at the cabin that morning. Perhaps then he would realize Silver had been acting a part.

Lem Sutherland had said it was biologically impossible for women to be honorable with each other when a man was involved. Silver had no sense of honor. She knew Lon had driven to Reno to see Marian, and yet she had deliberately pretended she must hurry to catch a train, in order to inveigle a solitary ride with him. Why should she be shown any honor? After she had treated Cliff Hendon as she had why be shown any consideration at all?

Marian knew that the highly principled Lon would be revolted by the Silver she had seen a moment ago. Why should she protect the girl against her own interest? (Copyright, 1934, by Jeanne Bowman)

Tomorrow, Marian makes a sacrifice.

THE SUNLIT ROAD

By Tom T. Jones

Carrying on the traditions of their father and uncle, the late Daniel N. and Philip A. MacLean respectively, D. Norman and Wilbur L. MacLean, associated together, realized yesterday that that day represented the 53rd anniversary of the first funeral which the founder of their present firm had conducted.

In this interval of more than a half century they and those active before them have officiated in the burial of 5,389 men, women and children, a total equalling more than the number required for the formation of a small city. It is believed that only the long activities of the Eells funeral firm in Lisbon, the county seat, exceeds in length of similar service in this section of the Ohio valley.

It was in November of 1881, the same year in which James A. Garfield was assassinated and Chester Allen Arthur of New York had succeeded him to the presidency that Daniel N. MacLean, who at 19 began his life work as a harness maker just west of his sons' present establishment, joined his brother Philip A. MacLean in business. The latter had previously been engaged in the demandful operation of a livery barn. With the alliance of the two brothers they arranged also for the conducting of funerals.

In those days there were no bridges spanning the Ohio river in the immediate proximity of Wellsville and East Liverpool. There were times when ferry boats were not in operation. It thus came about that the first burial made by the new funeral conductors was that of the late Judge William Moore, who lived in a brick home near the West Virginia section now touched by the Newell street railway bridge.

However, few records were maintained in early days, but it has been handed down that the body of this once jurist was conveyed across the Ohio river by means of a skiff. It is believed that he was subsequently buried following a service in the old First Presbyterian church in the Wellsville cemetery.

The second and third funerals by the founders of this firm were those conducted for Margaret McBain on December 7, 1881, and Elizabeth Harrison, one week later.

These pioneer funeral directors had been in business less than one year when the great disaster on July 4, 1882, of the sinking of the excursion boat, Scioto, off Mingo Junction in which many lives of Wellsville and East Liverpool residents were lost occurred. It is noted on the records of this firm how 12 residents of Wellsville were then buried by the father and uncle of the brothers now conducting the establishment.

Another long-ago Wellsville disaster, the deaths of several men in a fire in a nearby oil field, is recalled by the old records of this firm whose founders officiated at some of the funerals that followed.

In this long interval the marked evolution of the methods of handling the dead and subsequently burying them have been noted.

In earlier years the once-used white and black glass enclosed hearses, made in Ravenna, O., and Rock Falls and Freeport, Ill., were used. These were horse-drawn. In former years there were maintained about 14 horses by this firm for the exclusive use in funerals. The father and uncle of the MacLean brothers were careful in procuring in Pittsburgh, and elsewhere pink-skin white horses that matched for the white hearse and equally matching black horses for the black funeral vehicle.

There were occasions, due to bad weather and the presence of surrounding hills, when four horses had to be attached to the hearses used. There were occasions when horses in funerals became badly frightened for some reason or other during processions. The establishment was motorized in 1918.

Fine teams of horses in past days which were used in funerals cost from $600 to $800 a pair. The closed cabs cost between $1,200 and $1,500 each. The black hearses in former days cost $1,800 each.

Hearses, Cabs Preserved

In memory of past activities of their forebears in their work one horse-drawn hearse and three closed cabs have been preserved by the two brothers with a single horse-drawn ambulance. The cabs were sent to East Liverpool for the recent centennial anniversary parades, but lacking harness for some of the horses needed but one of them appeared, it is said.

About 15 years ago the establishment was transferred to Main street from Broadway where the father and uncle long operated. Now in a structure that runs from Main street to the street fronting the Ohio river there is room enough for motor equipment and a chapel in which 300 persons can be accommodated at a funeral, if necessary. Additional rooms for supplies that now are kept on hand instead of ordering from catalogues for shipments from Pittsburgh and Cleveland as in former days are maintained. A unique adjunct is a combined piano and pipe organ.

Not many, even in Wellsville, know that the windows of the establishment fronting the street bordering on the Ohio river, were transferred from the Presbyterian church that preceded the present stone structure of this denomination further west on the same thoroughfare. They portray Christ blessing children, Christ knocking at the door, and "The Resurrection."

AID NEEDY ON THANKSGIVING

Various church societies in East End this week will distribute baskets to needy families on Thanksgiving. Donations of food are being sought and will be made up into baskets and distributed by the members. The Epworth league of the Boyce Methodist Episcopal church in Kiondyke today completed a three-day canvass for food-stuffs and will deliver the food to homes Thursday morning.
